

Contents

Contents .....	5
Acknowledgements .....	7
Note .....	8
Foreword .....	9
Introduction .....	15
PART I – FEMALE INTELLECTUALITY AND READERSHIP IN VICTORIAN BRITAIN .....27
I. Female Authorship and Readership.....	29
II. The Novel in the Victorian Age.....	40
III. The Reading Debate in the Late Eighteenth and Nineteenth Centuries: Arguments For and Against.....	59
PART II – FICTIONAL EMBODIMENTS OF NINETEENTH-CENTURY FORMALLY-EDUCATED FEMALE READERS .....71
I. Formal Education in Victorian Britain.....	73
II. The Governess and Textual Reinterpretation: Charlotte Brontë’s Jane Eyre .....	84
III. Resistance to Auctorial Intentions: The Case of Maggie Tulliver.....	111
IV. Searching for Heroes of Erudition in Middlemarch : Female Readers between Apprenticeship and Bovaryism.....	140
PART III – FICTIONAL EMBODIMENTS OF NINETEENTH-CENTURY SELF-EDUCATED FEMALE READERS .....197
I. Readers on a Social Spectrum in Wuthering Heights .....	199
II. The Reverential Female Reader in Adam Bede : Preaching and Domesticity.....	240
Conclusion .....	269
Bibliography .....	275